What made you decide to get into coaching volleyball?

After leaving school I was not sure what direction my life was headed. During that time my former club coach had nudged me into attempting coaching. In a difficult moment in my life this person was a powerfully positive influence for me. When I realized how fun and rewarding coaching could be I decided I would take it seriously in hopes of paying forward what my former coach had done for me. Be a positive influence in someone's life through sports.

What are your career goals in the sport?

I never know how to answer this. I fantasize about coaching the national team or professional volleyball in another country. I am planning on continuing in the college world but I would also be content coaching club the rest of my life. I guess what I really care about is getting better and creating better environments players want to be apart of. Thinking you are regressing or plateauing as a coach is an uncomfortable feeling. My goal is to avoid that and make sure the people involved with my teams feel fulfilled.

Which coaches have influenced you the most?

- Phil George my first volleyball coach who I've been coaching high school with for almost a decade. Greatest role model of what a leader should be and moral compass I have been around.
- Konstantin Dimov my former club coach who gave me my first opportunities and the biggest influence on me during my formative coaching years.
- Eric Neely who I developed a great coaching relationship with and taught me what hard work looks like.
- Pat Helmas. Showed a young me how to have fun while also being in charge.
- Scott Grandpre, Mariah Hladick, Joe Mazzulla many more.

What do you enjoy most about your coaching job?

Feeling like I'm doing some positive and impactful with my time. Being around young energetic people who are playing a sport they love is a great feeling and being able to help guide them along in their volleyball journey feels even better. I love the competing, winning, running practice, watching film, fifth sets all of that but I think seeing the players grow over time is what I enjoy the most.
