What made you decide to get into coaching volleyball?

In addition to love for the sport, I decided to coach volleyball to empower and impact the lives of young female athletes. I wanted to teach players the value of facing adversity, to build strong self worth always, and to be comfortable taking up space on and off the court.

What are your career goals in the sport?

My overarching goal is to grow the sport of volleyball in New Jersey by establishing a strong, sustainable youth program that introduces children to the game at an early age. By fostering interest and developing fundamental skills from the ground up, I aim to build a deeper and more competitive talent pool across the state. Ultimately, my career aspiration is to become a club director, where I can make a broader impact by shaping the development of players, coaches, and the overall culture of the sport on a larger scale.

Which coaches have influenced you the most?

- Andrea Salazar - CJVA Club Director and Owner
- Bill Lee - DIGS Technical Director

What do you enjoy most about your coaching job?

What I enjoy most about coaching is the opportunity to make an impact on the lives of young athletes. While volleyball is the tool, the biggest reward is helping players grow into confident, resilient, and caring people. By welcoming them into a safe space where they feel supported, challenged, and inspired to grow, I have the privilege to make a lasting impact on their lives.
