What made you decide to get into coaching volleyball?

Growing up, I was fortunate to be surrounded by incredible coaches and teammates who made a lasting impact on me—not just as a player, but as a person. Coaching became the perfect avenue to stay involved while giving back after my playing career came to an end. It allowed me to pour into young athletes the same way my mentors did for me—teaching not just volleyball skills, but also the life lessons that come with being part of a team: resilience, communication, accountability, and confidence. Watching players grow both on and off the court is what drives me every day.

What are your career goals in the sport?

I really enjoy my job directing and coaching at Skyline BCS. I hope to continue to grow in this role and to equip players with the tools, mindset, and training needed to compete at the highest level. I'm committed to growing as a well-rounded coach and building the confidence to teach every facet of the game at a high level.

Which coaches have influenced you the most?

I've been fortunate to learn from numerous coaches throughout my volleyball career. Some of my greatest coaching inspirations have come from those I've had the privilege of working closely with. Kaitlyn Corbett and Kacie Street have been especially impactful, both serving as constant sources of motivation and trusted sounding boards. Individuals like Caroline Simpson, Tatum Smidovec, Katie Rude, Brian Thrift, and Jori Kennedy have all left a mark on me with their dedication, creativity, and passion for working with youth athletes. I am also constantly motivated and encouraged by the coaching community at H Skyline BCS!

What do you enjoy most about your coaching job?

One of the most fulfilling parts of coaching for me is building relationships with my players. I genuinely enjoy getting to know them—not just as athletes, but as individuals—and being a part of their journey as they grow and develop in a sport they love. Even more special is seeing them become better teammates—learning how to communicate, support, and lead with confidence. Witnessing their growth on and off the court reminds me why I love what I do. Being able to play a role in their development, both as athletes and as people, is something I never take for granted.
