What made you decide to get into coaching volleyball?

I was missing something from my life and I didn't realize it till I ran into one of my coaches years after I graduated. He inspired me a lot in my athletic career and mentioned I should get into coaching. I didn't think I would make a good coach until I stepped back into my old club and realized how much I missed the environment. I love volleyball and being competitive, and it just felt like home, that this is where I was supposed to be.

What are your career goals in the sport?

I would love nothing more than to be a professional volleyball coach. I obviously have a way to go but a long journey has never stopped me. Before accomplishing that I would like to be a college coach and win a national championship. Besides the accolades my biggest goal is making sure all my athletes are good human beings. Whether they continue to play volleyball or not, they are going out into the world to make it a better place and to pursue their passion with full effort.

Which coaches have influenced you the most?

All the coaches that have taught me, Matt Carlson, Jenna Markey, Ariel Houlihan, Sue Enquist, Nickie Sanlin.

What do you enjoy most about your coaching job?

Like most coaches I love the wins, but we don't always win. I enjoy seeing my players fall in love with the sport that I love so much. Seeing them evolve not just as athletes but as people. Learning life lessons, maturing through communication, creating confidence, breaking through rough patches, developing relationships, and of course becoming highly skilled athletes. I enjoy what this sport can bring to many people on and off the court and the environment and community we provide for so many.
