What made you decide to get into coaching volleyball?

As a sport that was slowly increasing with boys between 2010 to 2020, I decided to coach volleyball to show that it can be just as equally thrilling as the major sports of today. It was also a way for me to give back to programs that helped shape me into the volleyball coach and player that I am today, which is why I am proud to be part of the nearly 77% increase in boys' participation for volleyball in the last 10 years.

What are your career goals in the sport?

One goal is to witness the continuing growth of volleyball within the high school & collegiate level for boys that will offer them great opportunity for scholarships to help pursue their academic & athletic dreams. Another goal is to have the opportunity to coach high level volleyball, whether that be at the college level for men or women or possibly the international level. One career goal as a player that I strived for from high school and college was to play professional or semi-professional volleyball, and I am proud to say that I achieved this goal by earning my position as Middle Blocker in the Volleyball League of America (VLA) for Cincinnati Attack from 2024 to now.

Which coaches have influenced you the most?

Joe Bianco - Co-Director for Cincinnati Attack Boys Volleyball club
Sean Teirny - Head Varsity Coach for Elder High School

What do you enjoy most about your coaching job?

The thing I enjoy most about volleyball is that it presents the opportunity to bring people together, to have almost a family-like bond between teammates, coaches, enthusiasts. It develops young athletes to appreciate the team aspects and the trust that can develop when all players give their all to the game.
